Consent Deepfake Detection Accuracy and Its Predictive Indicators Among Generation Z University Students in Metro Manila, Philippines MSc in Social Research Methods, Department of Methodology, London School of Economics Thank you for your interest in this study. This study investigates which indicators most strongly predict Generation Z university students' ability to accurately detect deepfake videos — AI-generated media designed to look and sound realistic. Drawing on Media Dependency Theory and the Digital Divide framework, the study examines a range of predictors including media literacy, media dependency, social media usage patterns, trust in media, confidence, digital exposure, and socioeconomic status, among Filipino Gen Z university students in Metro Manila. By identifying the most influential predictors of deepfake detection vulnerability, the study aims to provide researchers and policymakers with the evidence needed to design targeted interventions that address the specific areas where this population is most at risk from the harmful effects of digital misinformation. What will my involvement be? If you agree to take part, you will be asked to watch a series of short videos — a mix of real and deepfake videos — and indicate whether each video is real or fake, along with how confident you are in your answer. You will also complete a set of questions about your social media habits, media consumption patterns, and background including your gender, university attending, age, year level, and parental occupation. The survey should take approximately 20-30 minutes of your time. Participation is voluntary. You can stop completing the survey at any point if you wish to. Since the data collection is anonymous, it will not be possible to withdraw the information you have provided once you have completed and submitted the survey. Will I be compensated for taking part? As a token of appreciation for your time, 200 respondents will be randomly selected to receive a ₱200 GCash e-voucher each. Entry into this prize draw is entirely voluntary and separate from the survey itself. Only participants who complete the survey by 20 July 2026 (11:59pm) will be eligible for the draw. At the end of the survey, you will be given the option to provide your contact details through a separate form to enter the draw. Your contact details will not be linked to your survey responses in any way, will be used solely to contact winners and send prizes, and will be securely deleted once the prizes have been given out. Winners will be drawn after the survey closes, and prizes will be given out within two weeks of the draw to provide ample time for batch processing of prizes. What will my information be used for? Your responses will be used in my Masters' dissertation. Your personal information will be kept securely and destroyed at the end of the study. Your IP address will not be collected during this survey. Your participation will be anonymous - your name will not be recorded or used in any reports or publications resulting from the study. The LSE Research Privacy Policy can be found online. Your data will not be processed using Generative AI tools, and no personal data will be shared with third-party systems or used to train AI models. Analysis will be conducted using standard statistical software.
